In response to the global COVID-19 pandemic, Skyward announced that it would temporarily reduce flight operations at its Airpark Hangars near Phoenix, Arizona until further notice. This includes removal of every plane that is not operational or undergoing maintenance. The company stated that these actions are temporary and that it will increase operations as soon as the crisis is under control. “Health and safety for our employees and the community remain our top priority,” said Mike Sellers, Executive Vice President, Skyward. “Our team is focused on providing customers with a safe and smooth experience while we respond to the rapidly changing dynamic of this crisis.” Skyward said that it will continue to monitor the situation daily and make decisions based on the direction in which it decides to travel. These actions do not apply to customer-owned and charter aircraft. The Airpark Hangars are available for rent at below-market rates until the current pandemic passes. Skyward’s marketing team is conducting a thorough assessment of how this crisis may impact programs already in the development stage. The company has been working closely with the sales, training, and marketing departments in an effort to further expand the brand. The transition to the new and improved Skyward will occur once the pandemic passes, says Sellers. Skyward is a brand of Aviation Worldwide Inc. (Nasdaq: AVWW), a publicly traded company (NASDAQ: AVWW) that owns and operates small general aviation airports and houses several leading regional air carriers as well as Jet Aviation services. Let's say I want to pass the user's username and password to the mod_wsgi app and the user to the Django app, so that the mod_wsgi app can connect to the DB (using the username/password). How can I do that? How does other django and mod_wsgi apps work? A: Ok I think I got it, using WSGIApplication to configure the WSGI environment Updated Vhost:
