What's new:

... take a ride with George Elliott Redmond... a man who tried to write the book on Billy Graham... and was caught. Monday, August 03, 2006 Seven Voices This is the summer I turned seven. I was born in the month of August, in 1947. Had I been older I might have realized that it was an auspicious day... but being seven I simply enjoyed it. I mean, look at the weather! Really think about it: The sun pours down everywhere in August. The temperature in the shade is high, so it is a good time to be outside. The flowers are blooming, so I can pick them and give them to my friends, especially my little brother. The corn is ready for the picking and there are carnivals everywhere, and they are great fun! The air is cool, so I can wear my new sneaker! It doesn't get much better than that... but it turns out that I actually missed out on one really cool thing. Really, did you know that, by accident, your parents would drop you off in a place like this, throw a brick at your head, and leave you there? There are a lot of really great reasons to stop and preach, and I do think we would be working in an area where it would be least appreciated. But although you might get a great story on one of these visits to Calvary, you would be far more likely to get a wonderful e-mail from one of these people. There is an e-mail for every crowd, and there are great stories to tell. God did not design us to travel the way we do on the Lord's Day. He knew that we as children would be at home, and would make these visits as a way to remind us of his presence. So I'm going to tell some stories about my time with Calvary in the next few posts, so that even if you are too young to join me... and aren't too young to understand it... you can look for the memories. What I remember most are the ongoing conversations. It was like having a family. And a conversation with one of them is worth far more than the stories of the visits. Although I've talked about it before, it bears remembering again. There is a story for every crowd, but there are also people coming up to the church for the first time that are crying out for a visit. They are not "crazy Christians" from somewhere
